

SONS OF THE PILGRIMS.

DINNER OF THE NEW-ENGLAND SOCIETY.
RESPONSES TO TOASTS BY MESSRS. EVARTS, BEECHER,
CURTIS, DEPEW, CHOAOTE AND OTHERS.

The annual dinner of the New-England Society of this city took place last night at Delmonico's. The attendance was large, and the festival was successful in every respect. Toasts were responded to by William M. Evarts, George William Curtis, Mr. Beecher, Chauncey M. Depew, General Grant, General Horace Porter, and the Mayors of New-York and Brooklyn. The president of the society, Marcelle W. Cooper, presided.

THE GATHERING AND THE GUESTS.

The loyal sons of the Pilgrims began to arrive at early dusk, having been warned that the dinner would be served promptly at 6 o'clock. It was the 263d anniversary of the landing of the Pilgrims, and 263 members and guests were present when President Cooper led the way to the dining-room, shortly after the appointed hour. About thirty were seated in an adjoining room, where Stewart L. Woodford, the president-elect of the society, presided. The tables had been arranged lengthwise of the main room, the one on the raised platform being at the south end.

The dining-room was tastefully decorated. Opposite the guests' table hung the society's banner, while a large flag had been draped below the gallery occupied by the musicians. Smaller flags and shields were arranged between the several mirrors. From the top of each mirror a graceful festoon of silk was suspended, terminating in the centre with a bouquet. The corners of the room were banked with choice palms and other tropical plants. A dozen large oval baskets of flowers and fifty small plants were placed upon the tables. Each guest wore a boutonniere. Among the table pieces was one representing a cotton factory; another was labelled "O-r-n-i-t-h-o-u-n-d-h-u-s" and "young." Bernstein's Orchestra played the march, "New-England States," as the guests and members were being seated. Selections from "The Beggar Student," "Prince Methusalem," "Aida" and "Carmen" were given later in the evening, the last at the request of Signor Campanini. "Yankee Doodle" elicited much applause.
